

“The Beauty and the Artist” by Ruth Gnesis

The artist asked her to sit for him. Her mother said okay,

He found inspiration in her serene yet mischievous smile.

She learned the fantasy of true from Rupert, the artist.

One night when the moon was full, he took the child in his arms;

The mother saw this and threw her out of the house.

The child went to the police and asked for a place to stay; And
For a mother who would love her.

The girl grew up to be an alcoholic and she tore men’s heart into pieces.

She would promise them the world and then gave them misery.

He was a handsome yet starving artist who only played around with his paints.

He was lazy and painted shallow likenesses of his sitters.

He hated God and all people and all the world.

He hated the young child who exposed her beauty to him.

She was lovely but his hate for everything ruined her.

“The Little Angel” by Ruth Gnesis

She was so innocent, so sweet to look at.
How many men’s hearts did she betray,
All because she was once hurt,
And underneath her beauty she wanted revenge.

When she was little her beloved father
Left her life forever to love another woman.

He threw away both mother and child
Because he was tired of monogamy
When he did this the child’s beauty was marred forever
For she could not hide the hate in her heart

“The tiny mermaid” by Ruth Gnesis

She lived on the glamorous seaside
With her mother and her mother’s lover
Her father was gone long ago

He did not like his wife’s cruel terms
There were too many men in the household
The beautiful child took a liking to a neighbor boy her
Own age
He got tired of her and broke her heart

She would live for the rest of her life without a love in her life

She had beauty incandescent but she waited all her life
For a soul mate
